

Executive Summary for the ITMA Web Site

The previous nine Academies addressed issues they believed were important to the IT community. Unfortunately, the valuable information developed by those previous Academies was not readily accessible and virtually unknown when our class participants came on board ITMA X. Also, there was no forum to present additional issues addressed by this Academy. The then-existing ITMA Website contained minimal information. Expansion of HHSDC's ITMA Website resolved this problem. Delivery of this enhanced Website was the second ITMA X deliverable.

1. The California CIO Perspectives 2003 Report is now available in a public forum via access to the HHSDC ITMA Website: <http://itma.ca.gov/> which enables the state IT community to gain valuable insight from a variety of CIO perspectives.
2. ITMA X class participants gained valuable knowledge and experience from participating in the CIO interview process, performing analysis of the data compiled, and in developing the final report.
3. The ITMA X class members exposure to CIOs and the experience of summarizing and synthesizing the information provided a valuable learning opportunity.

Value Added. ITMA project deliverables are accessible within the ITMA Website repository for past, present, and future ITMA participants.

Accessibility. ITMA information is available to the state IT community.

Marketing. The ITMA Website repository increases visibility for ITMA, and attracts new Academy participants and encourages more individuals to apply and participate in future Academies.

Automation. The Website provides an excellent and innovative tool, which replaced the former manual process with a new automated electronic application and class schedule processes.
